

While I support any effort to limit the consolidation of resources in regards to communications, I feel uneasy with the move that the FCC is proposing. As it stands, the vast majority of media outlets are already controlled by a select few-namely, those who have the money and influence to do so. The move to limit the number of media outlets that can be owned/controlled by any one corporation simply strengthens the monopoly that existing media corporations already possess and impedes any semblance of a fair market.
